All day Sunday the body of the dead actor lay to state in parlor 15 at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and was visited by hundreds of people, many of whom had personally known him, and others whose lives had been made happier by attendance at his performances.

Many even called this morning to view the body, but Col. Clayton McMichael, of Phila- 123 Fulton St., BET. NASSAU AND delphia, who had charge of the funeral arrangements, allowed only intimate and fam lly friends to enter the parlor. At 9.15 o'clock the family and pall-bearers with intimate friends, gathered at the hotel, and at 9.30 left by the Twenty-third street entrance, taking carriages for the church. Here an immense crowd of spectators had gathered in spite of the drizzling rain. No one was allowed to enter the church, however, or even pass the police lines, established by Inspector Williams and Capt. Warts, without a printed admission ticket.

The street between Lexington and Third avenues was closed to teams and carriages. The first carriage of the funeral party carried A. M. Palmer and Edwin Booth. They walked slowly up the church steps, the veteran tragedian leaning heavily on Mr. Palmer's arm. Mr. Booth's trembling con-

"I'm afraid he's the next.

Next came the other pall-bearers, Messrs, John G. Hecksher, William Winter, Charles N. Viles, C. F. Fearing, Clayton McMichael and John Russell Young.

After them came the casket, two large ferns, tied with purple ribbon, which Augustin Daly had sent, reposing on the top.

Then came the family, consisting of Police Inspector Peter V. Conlin and Benjamin Conlin, the dead actor's brothers, with their wives; Mrs. Norman Wyard and Mrs. Barney Williams, Mrs. Florence's sisters; Mrs. Shepherd and Mrs. George H. Mitchell, her daughters: Edward Conlin, Joseph Tooker and family, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Seymour, Mr. and Mrs. H. Pray and Mr. and Mrs. Martin

The floral offerings, which were profuse and magnificent, were removed from the hotel to the church earlier in the morning and arranged near the altar.

Fully 1,200 people attended the services, which began promptly at 10 octock. The high requiem mass was celebrated by Nev. Father Henry Pratt, rector of St. Columba's Church, Rev. Dr. Braun delivering the eulogy.
